Announcing the Interim Budget, acting finance minister Piyush Goyal on Friday proposed that individuals earning up to Rs. 5 lakh would get a full tax rebate. This will provide tax saving of up to Rs. 12,500 for all taxpayers in this bracket. Those who save more can effectively push this rebate up to an income of Rs. 6.5 lakh. Since this is a rebate and not a slab change, it will not impact the tax incidence of those with larger incomes though it will have some impact for those whose salaries are under Rs. 10 lakh as they can add home loans and tuition fees to get additional benefits. Goyal also announced that interest income of up to Rs 40,000 will attract no tax. However, he left its implementation to the next government for the full-fledged Budget after the Lok Sabha elections.

Goyal further said the tax interface would be made simpler, resulting in an increase in tax collections and return filings. The Union minister said tax scrutiny would be done electronically and there will be no interaction between the tax authority and the taxpayer.
