S34. Ans.(e)

Sol. All the given options are true. The answer to the question can be traced from the lines of 2nd paragraph where it is given as “Leaders like him see climate change as an irritating discourse. They think it has no substance or truth. Moreover, they feel it confuses and distracts the public. These leaders believe that no goal should override high industrial and economic growth.” Hence option (e), i.e. “All of these” is the correct answer choice.

S35. Ans.(d)

Sol. The answer to the question can be traced from the 3rd paragraph where it is given as “The two concepts are typically explained as being different in terms of changeability. Weather changes from day to day and season to season, according to standard geography texts. Climate, on the other hand, refers to a permanent frame within we study change in weather conditions” and “an educated person is expected to know that there are six climate zones. Many of us recall the different colours we used to fill up the Indian map to show these zones in an exam. Concepts formed in childhood become stable frames of mind.” Both the options (a) and (c) are correct. Hence option (d) is the correct answer choice.

S36. Ans.(d)

Sol. The answer to the question can be traced from the whole of the paragraph as the whole of the paragraph is conveying government’s lacklustre response to climate change. Option (a) can be easily omitted as it is the stating that though the sustainable development goals have been included in the school syllabus across Asia, but they are not given due respect when it comes to inculcating them in the students. Hence option (d) is the correct answer choice.
