Read the passage given below and answer questions:

Conventional and outdated wisdom asserts that we each have ‘learning styles’ unique to ourselves. The implication is that if you don’t learn using your preferred style you’ll fail to acquire the knowledge desired. It also allows you an excuse not to work hard at learning something new. In Soft-Wired, however, Michael Merzenich shows that the plasticity of the brain extends to the way we learn. In other words, we can learn how to learn. Indeed, we should focus strongly on doing this.

As well as reading or attending lectures, look at cultivating different learning styles-or, more precisely, learning strategies. Micromastery enables you to experiment and use a vast array of different learning strategies. Since all are designed to succeed brilliantly (with a modicum of persistence) at the micromastery concerned, you have a perfect chance to increase your store of potential learning strategies. This in turn increases your ideational fluency – your ability to switch between idea sets that may be opposed or contradictory. If one strategy doesn’t seem to work, no matter how wedded you are to it, you switch seamlessly to another. Ideational fluency is an attribute required of anyone working in a fast-changing, rapid-learning environment – the kind increasingly encountered today.

Q.55 Given below are two statements: one is labelled as Assertion A and the other is labelled as Reason R

Assertion A: Once Rule of Law is acknowledged as a constitutional law superior to the express provision in Article 21, it is only one step further to assert that Rule of Law is a 'basic feature' of Indian Constitution, which is beyond the pale of the express provision in Article 368, which was provided for by the initial constituent body.

Reason R: It is not unimaginable to conceive that the enacted provisions of a written Constitution would be nullified by invoking some unwritten principle of law of higher ethical value as evident under the West German Constitution of 1949.

In the light of the above statements, choose the most appropriate answer from the options given below

- 1. Both A and R are correct and R is the correct explanation of A
- 2. Both A and R are correct but R is NOT the correct explanation of A

Q.114 Given below are two statements: one is labelled as Assertion A and the other is labelled as Reason R

Assertion A: While TRIPS Agreement goes on to outline certain standards of protection for Geographical Indications (GIs), it does not prescribe a particular form of protection so long as these standards are met.

Reason R: Viewed in the historical context, it is unsurprising that while TRIPS reflects the relatively stable referent for trademarks, for GIs the definition is more fluid.

In the light of the above statements, choose the most appropriate answer from the options given below

- 1. Both A and R are correct and R is the correct explanation of A
- 2. Both A and R are correct but R is NOT the correct explanation of A

Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

“While interpreting the Articles of the Indian Constitution, the Court should remember that it is not construing a petrified legal parchment but reading the luscent lines of a human text with a national mission. The Court must never forget that the life of the Supreme Lex is nourished by the social setting, that juridical abstractions and theoretical conceptions may be fascinating forensics but jejune jurisprudence if the raw Indian realities are slurred over. The Constitution of a nation is being expounded whose people hunger for a full life for each, and therefore, a perception of the signature of social justice writ on it is imperative. ‘Nothing is more certain in modern ‘society’, declared the American Supreme Court at mid-century ‘than the principle that there are no absolutes. Legal Einstienism guides the Court, not doctrinal absolutes.’”

Read the following passage and answer the questions below:

As remarked by Dias, "no other firmament of legal or political theory is, so bejewelled with star as that of 'Natural Law' for it has engaged the attention of some of the greatest thinkers of all ages." The credit of giving birth to natural law goes to Greeks. After the Greeks, it was further developed and elaborated by the Romans. The early and original law of Romans was called 'Jus Civil'. Later on, the Romans developed another legal system called 'Jus gentium' which was considered to be the law of universal application. In the republican era of Rome 'Jus gentium' was reinforced by natural law or 'Jus natural' as it was commonly called. As pointed out by Brierly, by "Jus natural" the Romans meant "the sum of those principles which ought to control human conduct because founded in the very nature of man as a rational and social being." The law of nature is the expression of what is just against what is merely expedient at a particular time and place, it is what is reasonable against what is arbitrary, what is natural against, what is convenient and what is for social good against the personal will." Thus natural law was based on the rational and reasonable needs of a man's nature. According to Roman, natural law embodied the elementary principles of justice which were the dictate of rights and reason. In other words, those principles were in accordance with nature and were unalterable and eternal.
